Hello Thomas, thank you very much for the quick reply.

The solution - as you suggested - was to upgrade from 5.2.1 to the latest development version. (I am not sure why you were referring to it as the "old" version: on the website this is shown as the latest stable version at the time of writing. Is there a repository where there are more fresh versions available?)

For those reading this post later it may be helpful to know that you can find the description on how to do the upgrade in the download page but the paragraph only appears after you tick the "I have read and understood the disclaimer" checkbox - it took me a while to find this.

Many thanks again for open-sourcing this great product.

Zsolt
