Hello Andrew and Norwid, column-to-group assignments are defined in the column properties and therefore considered part of the data itself and not of the template. This is unfortunate in this particular case, but as Norwid pointed out (many thanks), macros can be used to solve this issue.

I also added the suggested show/hide all columns from a group feature. For now I added the menu items to the table view configuration menu close to the other column group related menu items. Alternatively, one might prefer them in the table header popup menu together with the other show/hide items. This menu is already quite large, but maybe the better place. What do you think is more intuitive?

Best wishes,

Thomas
